SUMMARY

Conflicts shatter lives and stunts development. And at the heart of many violent conflicts lie issues of inequality, injustice and exclusion. Conflicts have multiple drivers, operate as systems, are often local and do not stop at state borders. Responses require the influence, resources and commitment of different people and institutions, at different times. And young people, as members of a dynamic group in society, play a crucial role in positively transforming conflict situations and in building the foundations of democratic and peaceful societies. Without recognizing youths as agents of positive change, their trajectories in peacebuilding would likely be ignored, wasted and at best, under-utilized.

Peacebuilding activities address the root causes or potential causes of violence and stabilize society politically and socioeconomically. Thus, successfully create an environment supportive of self-sustaining, durable peace; reconcile opponents; prevent conflict from restarting; integrate civil society, and address underlying structural and societal issues. That is why partner organisations are putting their voices together to start this youth exchange to:

- 1. Build bridges between participating countries and promote values and behaviors of understanding and coexisting necessary to re-establish a culture of peace;
- 2. Facilitate theatre and role-play activities as well as mediation sessions to help participants find ways to prevent conflict and accept differences;
- 3. Facilitate conversations about peace and integration;
- 4. Provide young people with the opportunity to engage in constructive, peace-building activities.

A number of themes will be covered: 1) civil society, 2) reconciliation, transformation and peace-building processes, 3) trauma, mental health & psycho-social well-being, 4) rule of law, security and public order, and 5) empowerment of under-represented groups.
